ABSTRACT

An inspection system inspects features of an object using a feedback mechanism. The inspection system includes a processor that receives image data representing the object. The processor is operable to determine parameter modification information from the image data and modify an image parameter used during the production of the image data with the parameter modification information. The modified image parameter is used during the production of subsequent image data representing the object.